WIRES UNDER GROUND.

Work on Underground Conduits for the Telephone Wires

WILL COMMENCE THIS MORNING.

Two Conduits, on Main and Market Streets, from Tenth to Sixteenth—A Scheme for a New Telephone System in Wheeling—It Will be a Co-operative Concern—Cheaper Rates Promised.

The multitudinous mass of telephone wires that encumber all of the principal streets of the city will soon disappear, the wires going where they belong—under the ground.

It will be remembered the Central District Company, which owns the local system, applied last summer for a franchise from the City Council allowing them to build conduits, when the wires could be put under ground. The franchise was granted last June, and later on conduits were constructed over the Main street stone bridge and along bridge place, from the steel bridge to Market alley and Main street. Since then nothing more has been done, and operations will be actively resumed this morning. Yesterday Hamilton Bros., the contractors, applied for and got a permit from the city to tear up the streets for the purpose of constructing conduits on Main and Market streets, from Tenth to Sixteenth streets. The work will be continued this summer until finished, and will practically do away with outside telephone poles and wires in the business portion of the city. In addition to the Main and Market street lines, branch conduits on side streets will be constructed.

The capacity of the conduits will be for one thousand five hundred wires, which Manager Wolff, of the Central District company, says will be sufficient for fifty years to come.

This action of the telephone people is the first step in the right direction.

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Will Probably be Established Here Soon, With Cheaper Rates.

There is a movement on foot to organize a new telephone company here soon, and it will probably materialize in a few days.

Since the expiration of the fundamental patents on telephone apparatus, new systems have come into use, some of them of merit. Among these is the Shaver system, which is now in use in McKeesport, Pa. A number of Wheeling business men who think they know a good thing when they see it, are now getting up a company for the purpose of introducing this system into Wheeling. Several of them will go to McKeesport this week, go over the field there, and examine the new system, when a report will be made to other local people who are interested in the enterprise. If the outlook and the new system are alike satisfactory, and the promoters are sanguine of success, steps will immediately be taken to secure the necessary franchise and the company organized.

The plan as outlined to an INTELLIGENCER representative by a business man, who had been approached and asked to take stock in the venture, is to make it a co-operative concern. For instance, a man who has one phone will own one share of stock, and those having two will be entitled to two shares.

Perhaps the most telling argument for the new company will be the fact that the cost per phone will be much less than the rates charged by the Central District company.

A rate of three dollars a month will probably be adopted if the scheme goes through, much cheaper than the prevailing charges.

EX-OFFICER FAHEY.

He Defends Himself Against the Numerous Reports in Circulation.

Ex-Policeman Joe Fahey, who was removed by Chief of Police McNichol on March 1, called at the INTELLIGENCER office last evening and asked to have a statement made in his behalf. Since Officer Snider was removed for alleged neglect of duty in connection with the assault on Slater, a street car driver, by Gosney, in North Wheeling, the talk about Fahey's case has been renewed.

It will be remembered that on February 28 there was some trouble on Main street near Twenty-sixth on the street car line, and Chief McNichol's statement was that he drove all over the ward and failed to find Fahey, who had been detailed for duty at the scene of the street car trouble.

Heretofore Fahey has not paid any attention to the reports, but the recent renewal of the charges aroused his indignation. He says that on the evening the trouble occurred, he has since learned, the chief did drive down through the Sixth ward, and in about an hour after drove back. When the chief passed down, he was absent responding to a call from Jacob street, and when the chief came back he was again absent, having been summoned to Market street for an emergency. If any serious affair had happened at either place to which he was called, and he had not been there in response to the notice, of course he would have been held responsible by both the chief and the public. A case in point is cited by Fahey, in the cutting scrape at the Grand Opera House, where Officer Weitzell had been told to stay. He stayed, and was removed for not leaving his post to prevent the affray.

Fahey says the real fact is that McNichol had promised places to several persons, and was looking for excuses to get rid of old men to make room for new ones. In two other cases he promised to remove officers, but simply changed them to another beat.

TOOK A WOMAN HOME.

Frank Storkey by a Peculiar Action Brings on What was Almost a Domestic Tragedy.

Last night about 9:30 o'clock Frank Storkey, who lives on the upper part of the Island, played the leading role in a lamentable and unjustifiable domestic difficulty, which was almost a tragedy.

About that hour Storkey met a woman on one of the streets on the Island, and they went together to his home. Leaving the woman whose name could not be learned in the front room, Storkey went into another, where his wife was, and made the very peculiar statement to her, that the woman he had in the front room was to stay there all night. His wife was curious to learn who the companion of her husband was, and proceeded to the room where she was sitting. This action angered Storkey, who dealt her a terrible blow on the head, which felled her, inflicting a long gash on the forehead. Displayed over the results of his brutal action, Storkey left the house, as did also the woman. Officer Stump, hearing outcries, arrived upon the scene just as Storkey was going down the street, and pursued, finally catching up and capturing him after running several blocks. He brought his prisoner over to police headquarters, where he was locked up, charged with wife beating.

Mrs. Storkey was attended to by neighbors. It was seen that her injuries were not fatal, though her husband had struck her with terrible force. She bled a great deal from the wound on the forehead.

 Paused in the shade to rest,
 He threw his arms around her there,

 Befitting to your beauty.

 Dear Cord why wish for gold,
